IN MEMORIAM

MISS IDA E. SCHNIREL

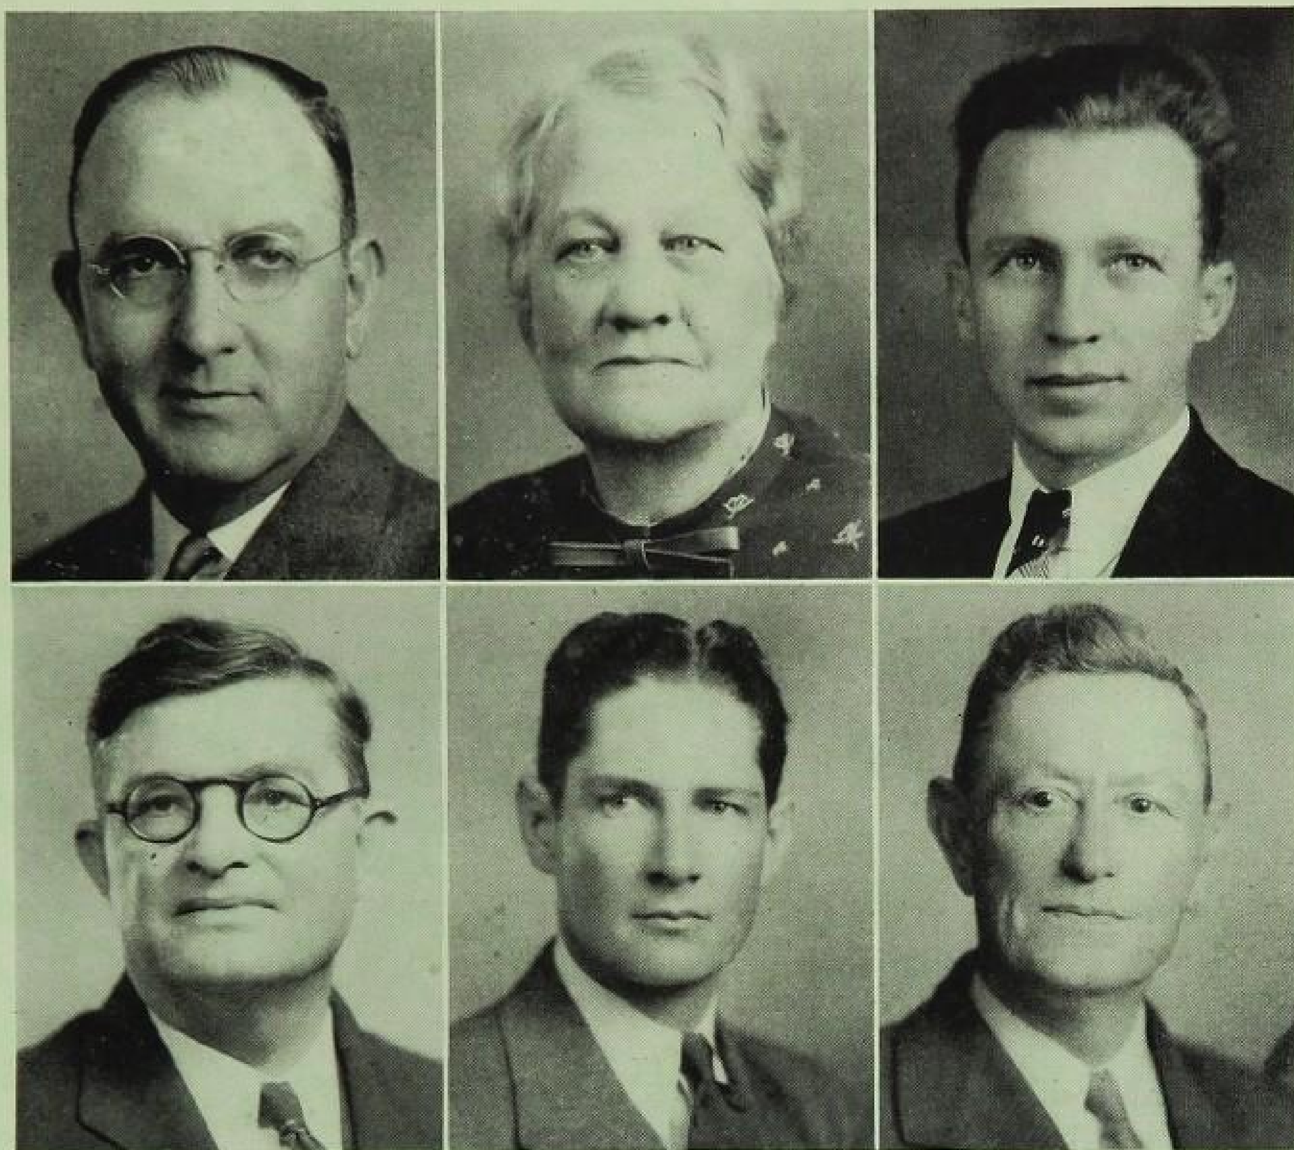

We, the students, pay tribute to Miss Ida E. Schnirel, whose fidelity, love, sympathy, and high ideals were a guide to each who yielded to her influence. Our hearts overflow with devotion and gratitude for what she has done for us and for our school. Neither death nor time can ever alter or change in any way her immortal spirit. The mildew of the years will not blot out our loving memory of so true a friend.

She sought nothing for herself beyond the strength of her endeavor. She stood as a flaming torch, giving forth a willing light of advice to all who sought her help. The problems of the students were her problems. It was her supreme desire to develop, fashion, and bring to light in youth the highest qualities of his mind, his character, and his soul.

No student found his efforts wasted in her sight, for each received individual interest, heartfelt appreciation for his work, and encouragement to do bigger and better things.

The tide of time has now borne a dear friend and a beloved teacher from us, but in reality she is living! Her spirit as an ever-glowing, incandescent light is shining before us always, urging us to be patriotic, loyal, just and pure.

TO THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

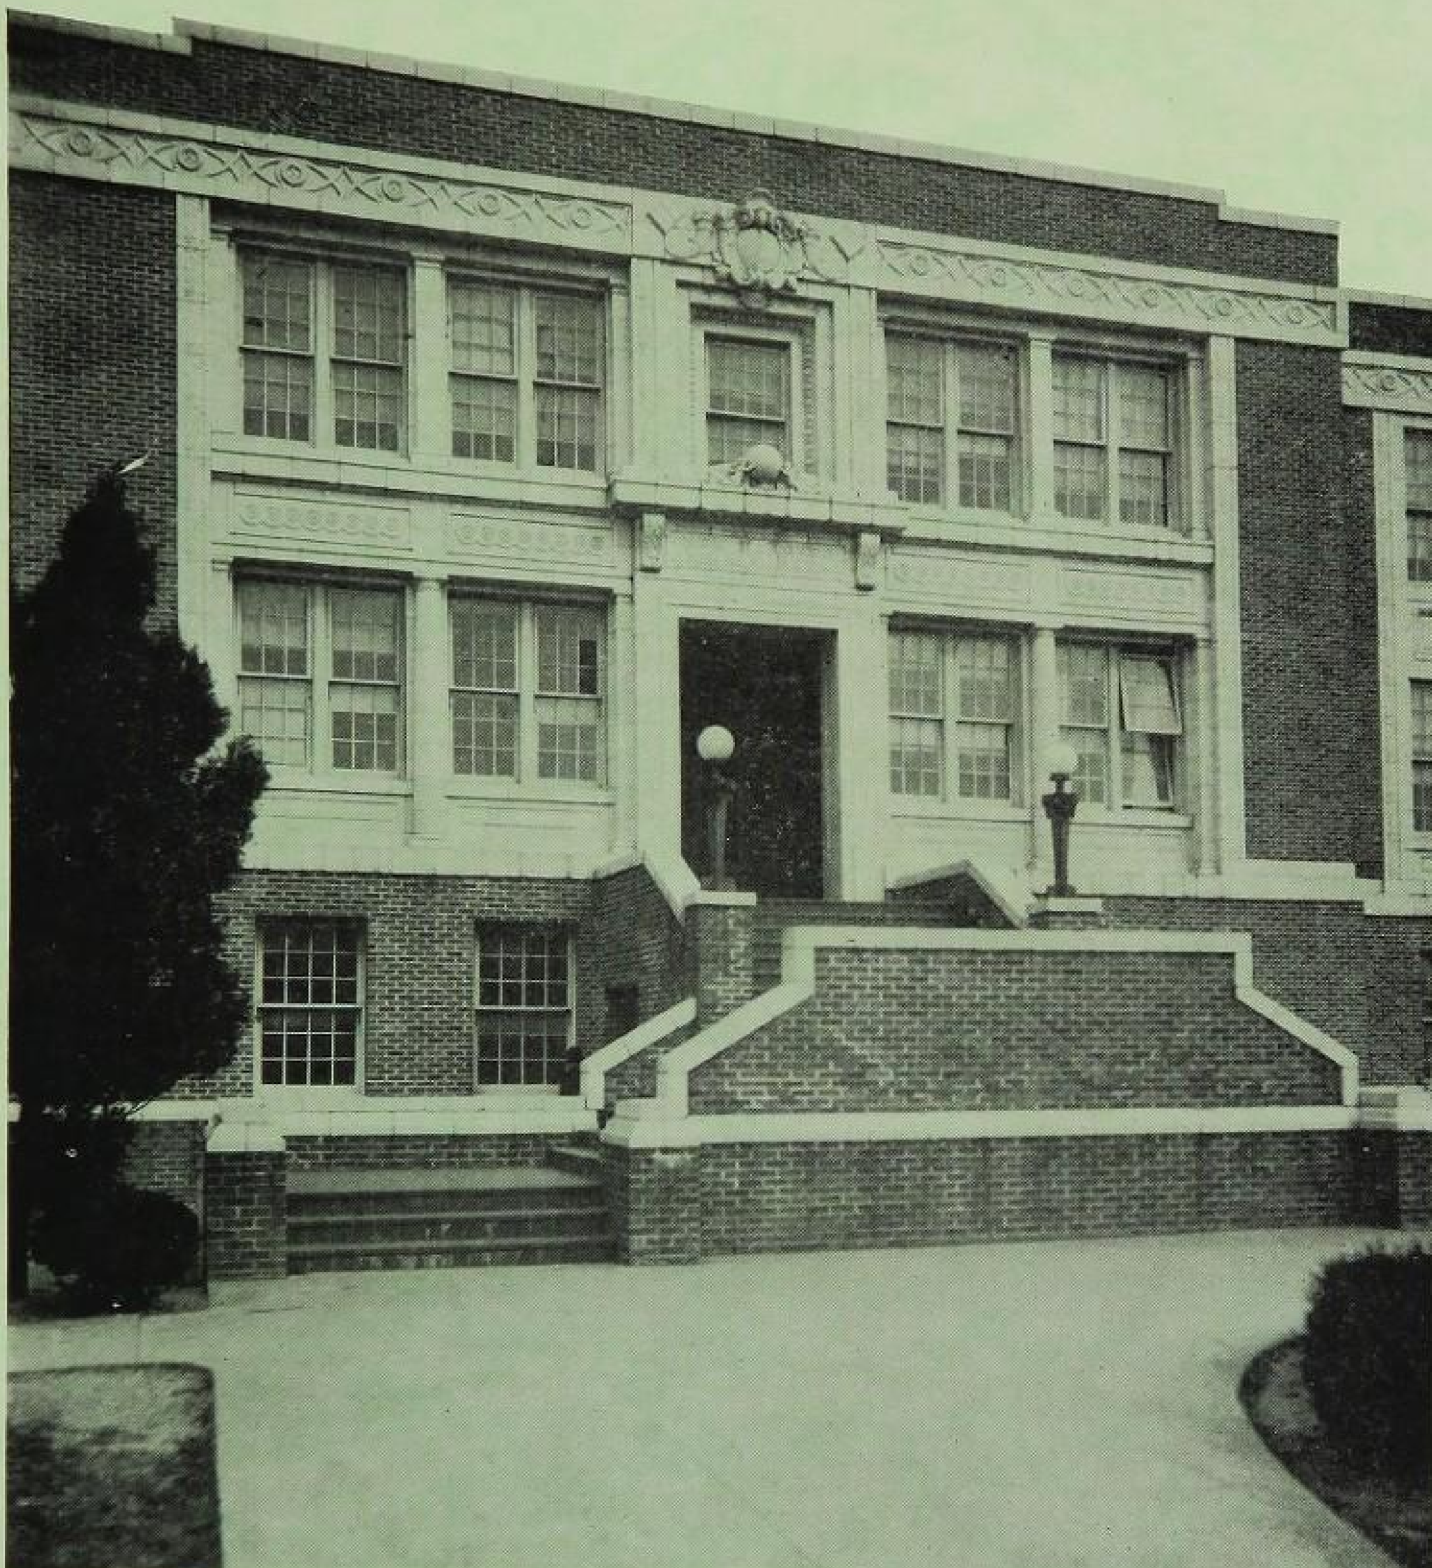

IN RECOGNITION OF THEIR PROGRESSIVE LEADERSHIP, AND IN DEEP APPRECIATION OF THEIR UNCEASING INTEREST IN THE GROWTH AND ADVANCEMENT OF OUR SCHOOL, THIS THIRD VOLUME OF "THE HANOVERIAN" IS GRATEFULLY DEDICATED TO THE NEW HANOVER COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Foreword

Of the romance of the sea; of starlit nights on a broad expanse of ocean beach; of treasure trove and mystery deep and daring . . . outside the law . . . of the magic of men's deeds which live on after them . . . they who have done no good; who live and love and make their own code; whose philosophy is of today alone and no thought of the morrow . . . Of the past and all the lyric music of actions then; adventure.

To this we look in selecting a motif for our annual, THE HANOVERIAN. Wilmington and the surrounding North Carolina coast is steeped in tales of pirates and treasure. Many of them are wild and inexplicable; many of them are based on actual court records of bold men tried for piracy and hung who have told some part of their story. In the main we have only fragments of history which curdle our blood and maintain a continual thrill to those of us who have sought out such mystery. But, from these fragments we select our theme and motif . . . in vivid contrast to the speeding age of tomorrow when such treasures will become even more invaluable.

FROM THE CLASS OF '38

We are so fond of thee, dear school,
  We hate to leave thy gates;
Although the time has come at last
  When one's life work awaits.

We wish to thank thee very much
  For the good that thou hast done,
For the friendship of each other
  In our days of work and fun.

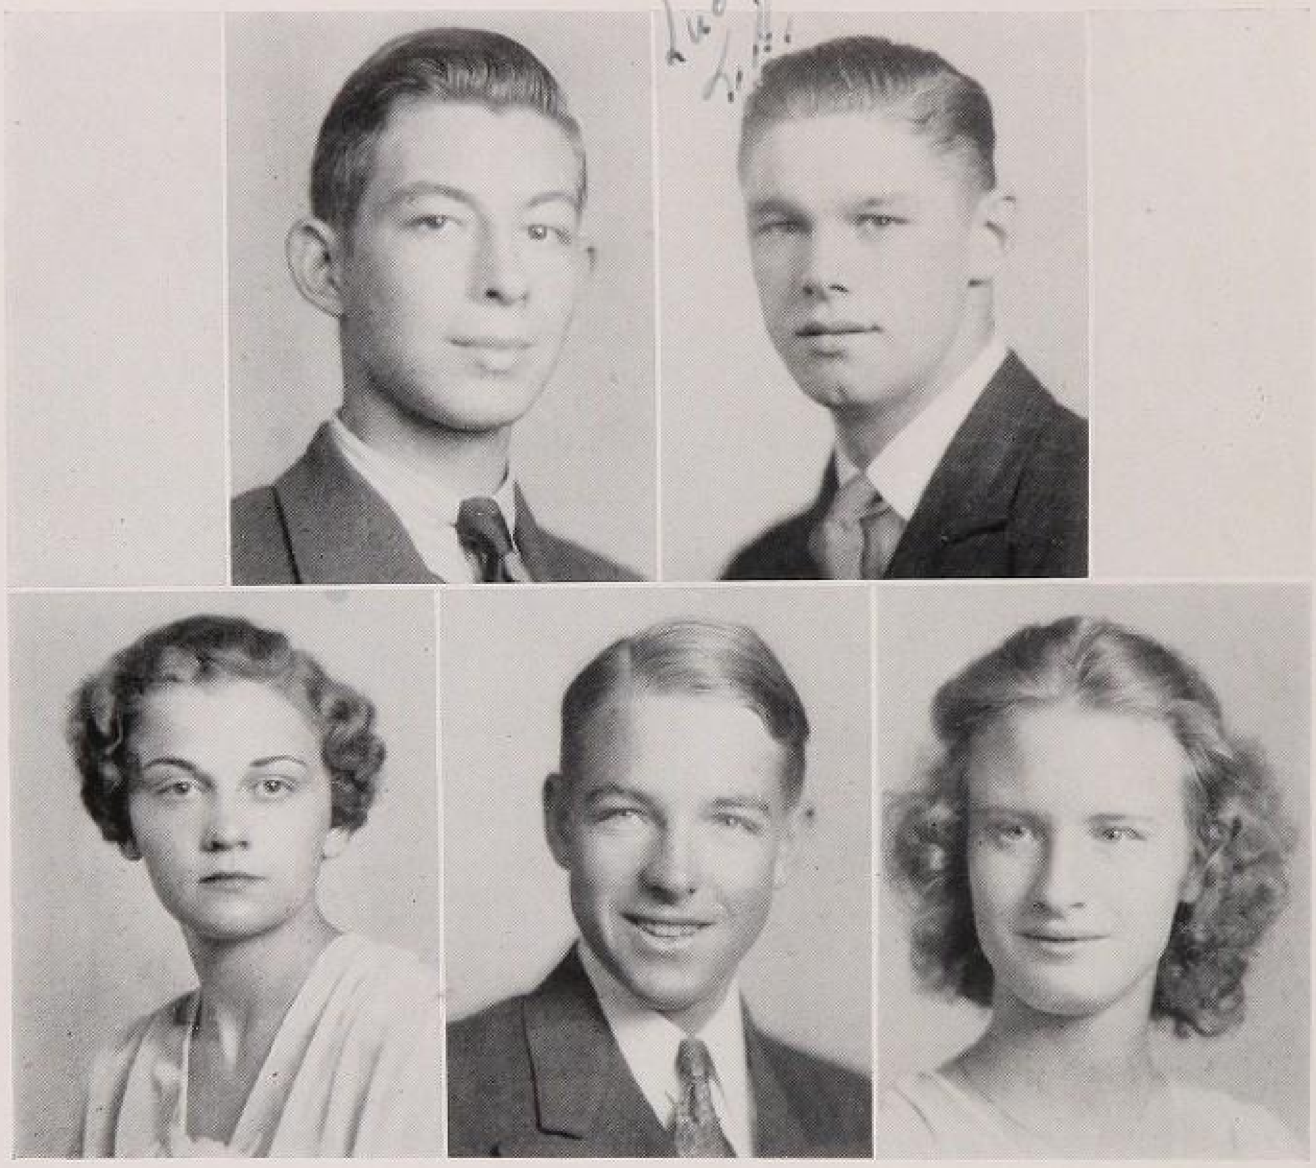

The thought of all our teachers dear
  We ne'er will forget,
For having taught us what is right,
  We ne'er will regret.

And now the time has come at last
  When we shall graduate;
We wish to say "Good luck to all!"
  From the class of '38.

A Cooperative Vocational Training Plan has been inaugurated at New Hanover High School this school year. Each student enrolled is placed in an occupation which has been carefully selected to meet his desires, qualifications, and vocational tendencies. The student's progress throughout the course is under constant supervision.

The cooperative employment program aids both the student and employer. It prepares the student for employment by allowing an opportunity to get actual job experience. And, at the same time, makes available for employment those students who have received worthwhile training and experience in the occupations represented in Wilmington.

An advisory group chosen from industrial, business, school, labor, professional, and club leaders has been used this year to assist with the beginning of the program.

CLASS HISTORY

Through four years of work and play, and life together, our classmates have been our companions. As we approach graduation the days of the past are recalled to us: the loneliness of the first day and the perplexities of that first day in high school; yet with all these the pleasures of new friends, the joy of a new enterprise, and a broader and richer life than we had ever known.

Graduation from high school is an event that marks the end of one period of life's journey and suggests the beginning of a new. We look backward with pride and joy at what we have accomplished and forward with hopes and dreams. This is a history, and so it deals with the past. We must not remember the past unless it inspires us for the future. This history is written in the hope that one glimpse at its pages will revive vivid memories of the fine and happy days that we spent in New Hanover High School.

It seems but a short time ago that we were labeled Freshmen. We were welcomed into the school by the upper classmen and the principal, Mr. Fred Greene; but we soon found that we did not count for much. We elected Dan Cameron as our first president and Billy Brown as vice-president, and tried our best to enter into the life of the school; but we discovered that our great task was in finding our corner and keeping out of the way of the upper classmen. We soon were able to resign ourselves to the fact that the future would be our time for leadership. We know now that our preparation for our present privileges started then. For then, we led not—but followed. Another uncertainty was added to our already uncertain minds—our beloved principal resigned to accept another position.

We were ushered into our Sophomore year wondering how we were coming out. But, like storm clouds that turn into brilliancy, our doubts were dispelled when we were met by our new principal, Mr. T. T. Hamilton. Hugh Sprunt was elected as our leader, ably assisted by Martha McCaig, vice-president. We began to feel our importance. We were well represented in clubs and other organizations. We took our place from time to time on the stage. As the months passed, we not only felt our importance, but we made others feel it. We can tell now, from our place of privilege, that our first two years were years of preparation.

Changes are always occurring and we were no exception. A supplement was passed allowing us to have nine months. This was an excellent step forward for the school. New Hanover High was put back on the accredited list of schools. It was now a school from which we would be proud to graduate.

We continued on our journey into our Junior year with Billy Brown as our president and Jack Neuer as our vice-president. We were known and recognized then. Our feeling of importance gave place to a feeling of responsibility. We began to occupy places of leadership, and we were well represented in athletics. The success of several enterprises depended upon our interest and work. The Hi-Y Minstrel got its full share of talent and support from our class. Our Junior Play, "Murder at Rehearsal," measured up in a fine way in both merit and financial success. We entertained the Seniors at the annual Junior-Senior Prom. Our members held enviable positions on the paper staff, and we had one representative to the annual staff. Then, to climax the year's achievements, twenty-two members of the class were honored by being elected to the National Honor Society, the desired goal of every student in high school.

Our vacation of three months passed quickly and then—we were Seniors! Senior—what a wealth of feeling, memories, and expectations the word suggests: feeling, because of the love and loyalty our class bears toward this school; memories, when we think of the pleasant and all-too-short years we have spent here; and expectations, because we realize that we are now graduating into a new life. All that this new life holds for us will be made richer, fuller, and more significant because of what we are carrying into it from this institution.

We had looked forward to the first Senior privilege, the thrill of going up the front steps; we bear witness that we were not disappointed. The leadership of the Senior Class is supreme, and the members of our class have proved themselves worthy to be leaders. Wilbur Bryant has made an efficient president, always encouraged and supported by L. H. Houston, vice-president. The school paper reached high efficiency under the leadership of the Seniors. Clubs and organizations were active under Senior leadership. Twenty-nine members of the class were added to the National Honor Society making fifty-one members in all.

There were sorrows and clouds as well as joy and sunshine. The sudden death of our teacher and friend, Miss Ida Schnirel, cast a shadow over our Senior year. A tribute of our love and esteem for her is fittingly expressed in this annual. We will not forget her; love is immortal.

Graduation from high school is the climax, but the activities that precede it are memories, never to be forgotten. They all came in a line: the Senior Play, "Kempy"; next, the Junior-Senior Prom; and, finally, the Hi-Y Minstrel. These were the joyous events which crowned our high school career.

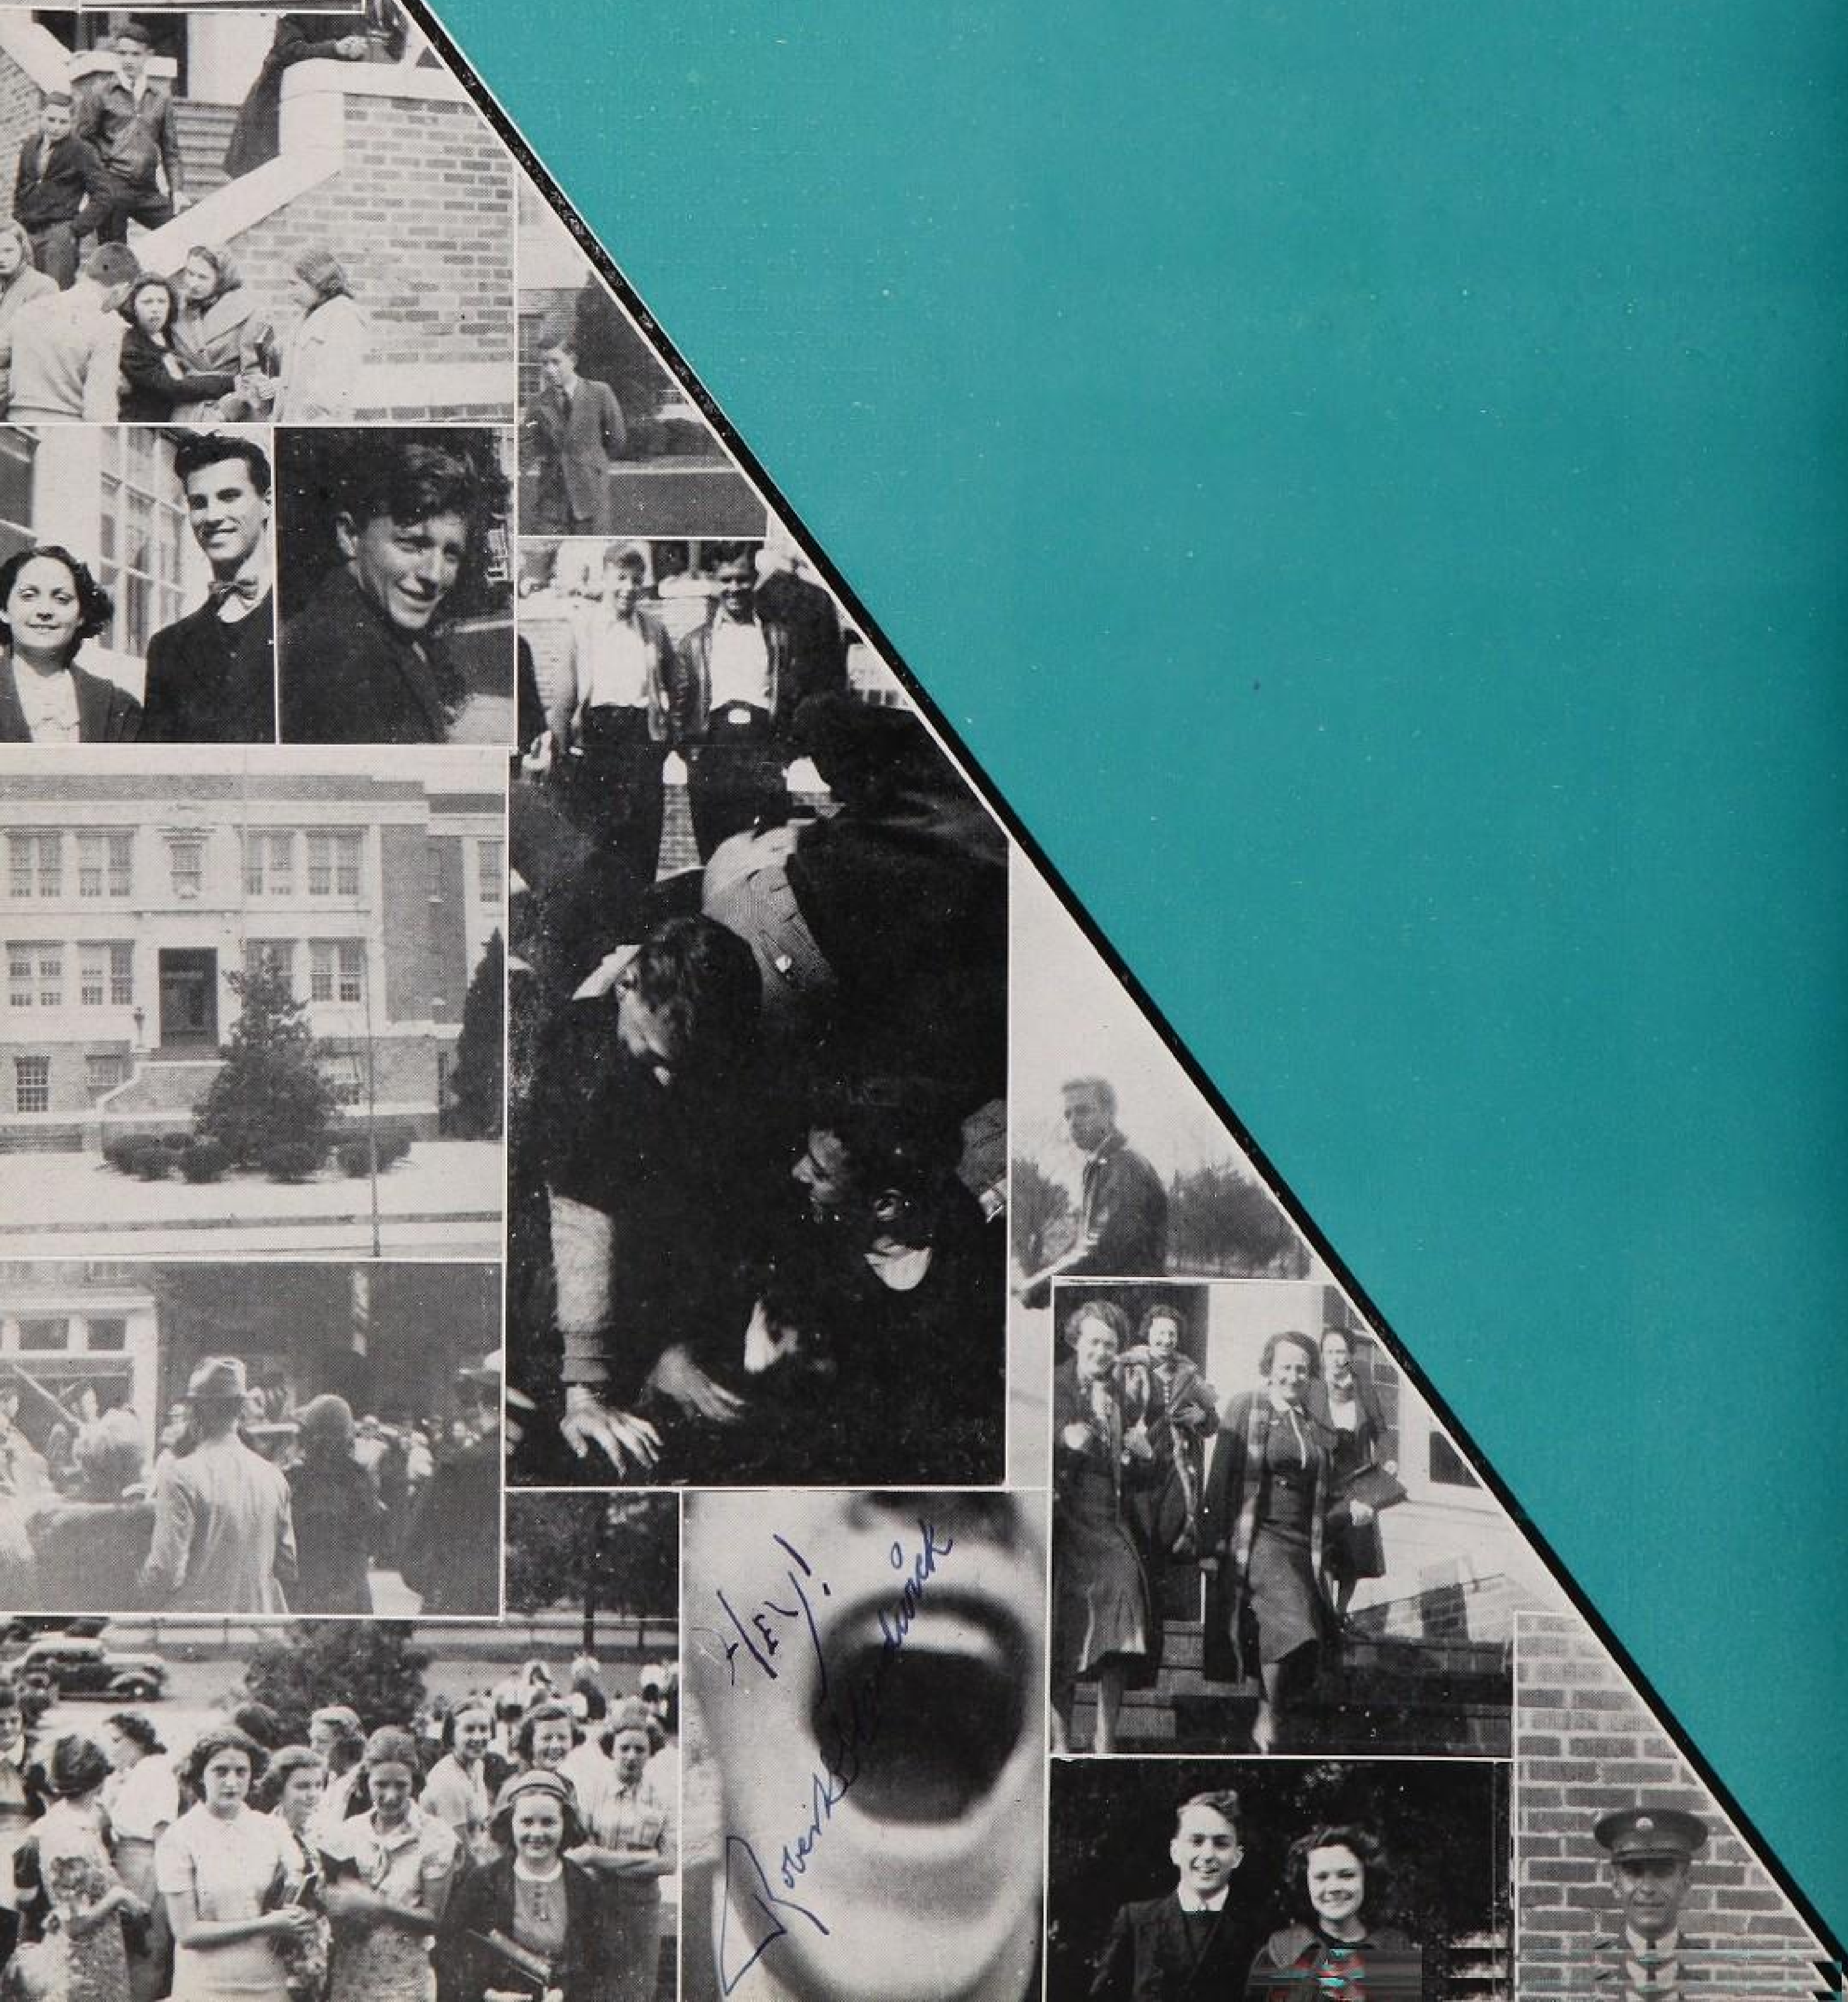

The dedication of the annual to the School Board of Education of New Hanover County will be a constant source of satisfaction to the members of this class. It is with pride that we dedicate this book to them. Every good thing that has been done for us during our school days was made possible by the School Board. They have made us proud to say, "That's my school!"

Through the coming years the one ideal that should be the motto of this school can guide us in attaining the truest and most satisfying success, a success that can be ours regardless of the trend our lives may take, if we keep the ideal of Service ever before us.

Kathleen Lewis,
Class Historian.

CLASS PROPHECY

The earth has revolved around the sun twenty-five times since June 3, 1938. Times have changed, and the graduates of N. H. H. S. have assumed various roles. Behold!

Sam Bissette, Secretary of State, is heatedly discussing the new George Mathis-Peyton Townes Tariff restriction of the produce from the Harold Wells-James Sloan Super Colossal Safety Pin Company. Secretary Bissette picks up the safety pin to present it to his committee made up of Kathleen Lewis, Helen Pieper, Frances Withengeals, Alton LeRay, Bill Womble, and Lawrence Rose. In his rage Mr. Bissette violently bites upon the pin. Zoomp, down it goes! to launch itself in the fleshy portion of his lung. His secretary, Emily McCall, nervously picks up the phone installed by the Herbert Shain-Russell Chinnis Telephone Company; and asks the operator, Doris Batson, to connect her with Number 1938. The director of nurses, Ruth Stanley, answers in a low, confident voice and arranges to send the ambulance driven by Harry Barnhill to the Legislative House designed by Caroline Newbold. When the ambulance made by the Rufus Parlier Motor Company arrives, the patient is placed on the Walford Thompson patented stretchers. The sirens of the Harry Futch Noise Corporation announce the catastrophe. The immediate stop before the Beth Slocum Hospital caused by the brakes of J. T. Rich's Halting Apparatus Company gives vent to a screech that advertises the need of lubrication by the product of Elbert Sikes' Ten-In-One Oil Trust. The ailing secretary is rushed up the steps laid by the Richard Dixon Stepping Stone Company and on into the emergency ward under the direction of Dr. Betty Henderson. The staff of nurses in this department, Betty Conaway, Emma Dunlea, Newell Pendleton, Ruth Helen Coble prepares the patient for an X-Ray. The machine is operated by Margaret Hunt. Then the patient is carried to the tenth floor in the five hundred fifty-fifth elevator from the Thomas Newton Elevator Corporation. As the patient is placed on the operating table, internes Charles Edward Domler, Linwood Rowan, and Gerard Verzaal slip their steady fingers into the rubber gloves put out by the Peggy Jones Rubber Manufacturing Company; Doctor John Wrede takes charge. The nurses assisting, Dorothy Everett, Ruth Gholson, Annie Wood, and Jane High arrange on a glass tray instruments sterilized with water heated by the Fred Johnson Electric Heater. The ether cone sent from the laboratory directed by Dexter Breazeale is applied, and a tiny drop of ether manufactured by the Claude Bledson-Carl Blanton Ether Company renders the patient unconscious. Electricity generated by the Tommy Swain-Marion Westbrook Power Company provides a strong light necessary for such an operation. A long forked instrument passes through the throat and down into the lungs. By carefully watching the new type of X-Ray invented by Billy Skipper, the doctor manipulates the instrument so as to grasp the safety pin and slowly pull it forth. The nurses in their uniforms made from cotton raised by Robert Carter use the sponges manufactured by Robert Millis to catch the blood. The operation is at last completed and the patient is wheeled down the hall on the linoleum recently laid by a linoleum expert, Harry Ferrell. Then laid between two cold sheets, the Secretary of State under the influence of ether begins to mumble his dream.

From his conversation Benjamin Morrill, a professor of psycho-analysis gathers that the American Ambassador to Russia, Bobby Jones, has persuaded the Russian Government to lease the United States an interest in a mine, and Kelly Jewell is sent to supervise the mining of the rich gems. The President of the League of Nations, Wilbur Bryant, is recommending that the committee on the regulation of clocks appoint Billy Best as official clock winder. Foxy Howard and Steele Trail, renowned comedians, are making cracks on the radio about the present administration under Annie Mae Bowden, President of the United States. Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Cyrus Hogue, has ruled that the President's bill granting Nathan Haskett and Roger Earp sold rights of popcorn manufacturing is unconstitutional, North Carolina representatives to Congress, Vernon DeVane, Robert Hardwick, and Alex Mitchell from Burgaw, Topnot, and Hickorynut Gap respectively, have given a statement to Harold Kerr, reporter of Janice Pickard's daily paper, "The Tough Town News," that they openly oppose the President's measure. Tom Shaw, the nation's number one G-Man, assisted by three women detectives, Helen Canfield, Vivian Pittman, and Helen Russ, has solved the mystery shrouding the death of the late Secretary of the Treasury. Kenneth Biggs, the famous bridge builder, and his staff of building directors, Louis Carroll, Ralph Volk, and Joe Outlaw, have just completed a streamlined bridge across Niagara Falls so as to make honeymoons more enjoyable. Miss Mary Wheeler has been chosen to christen the bridge with a bottle of Bobby Whitaker's bubbling champaign put up by the Bobby Watters' Bottling Company. Vashti Gornto and Lucy Clark, heads of the greatest steel corporation in the world, are asking for national aid in quelling their biggest strike in years. Eloise Honnet, head of the A. F. of L., and Roger Kirk, head of the C. I. O., are at each other's throats because of the crisis. Mr. Fred Smith, leading broker of the Stock Exchange, draws up a compromise between the two organizations. Since almost all houses are now made up of glass, housing conditions are becoming very critical now that the Charles Murray, Emery Murray, Robert Grissom Glass Plant is shut down. Soon the plant is back on its feet and everything is going along nicely. When, suddenly the world is revolutionized, since Jack Neuer and Robert Andrews, famed scientists, have flown beyond the stratosphere.

Then slowly Secretary Bissette comes out from his ether spell and by the attentive care of four night nurses, Helen Coley, Ella Mae Bullard, Frieda Brookshire, and Louise McCrary we find him quite improved in three days.

After a talk with the hospital dietition, Mary Alice Blackham, Mr. Bissette discovers that Alex Janicki sends from his Dairy Farm a milk wagon driven by Ralph Walton to deliver milk every morning at the hospital at 5:59 o'clock. Mr. Janicki is renowned for his excellent cows which are well fed by grass growing from the seeds of Joe Reaves' Sprouting Seed Store. There are nineteen cows milked by thirty-eight cow hands and milk maids, the most prominent of whom are Tom Underwood, James Robertson, Ruth Holmes, and Martha McCaig. Groceries are sent every morning to the hospital from James Aldridge's Home Service Store.

Having become bored with the dull routine of the hospital, the Secretary demands that his radio and television set recently perfected by Anthony Mazur be removed from his home to his room in the hospital. When these are installed by Julian Tusch, the Secretary gives a vigorous twist of the dial, and behold! his ears are graced with a recital featuring Arthur Xanthos, noted violinist, who studied for fifteen years in Italy and his accompanist, Rachel Pearsal. Static necessitates a change of stations, and whiz: "This is your announcer Elizabeth Browning bringing you greetings and salutations from the Florence Woodbury Chicle Chewing Gum Company. Listen to the swing rhythm of Oscar Peck and his Bushels accompanying Billy Parker, the heartbreaking crooner, as he sings, 'Dear Sweet Pea.'" More static forces the Secretary to turn to another station, and this time he gets in on the big Army-Navy football game. The members of the Navy led by the Rear-Admiral, Harry Symmes and their sponsor, Mary Corbett, parade at one end of the field, while the Army headed by their Major, Ray Funderburk, and their sponsor, Gerry King, parade at the other end. Ralph Shimer makes a touchdown for the Army in the first quarter, but the Navy comes up for a tie as R. A. Burnett makes a touchdown during the last quarter.

After the game, Station NHHS of the Edith Philpott Network announced the presentation of a play titled "Love in Summer," written by Lucille Parker and published by the Mary Parsley Williams Publishing Company. The leading lady, Dorothy Roland, co-stars with L. H. Houston. The supporting cast includes Nell Oliver, Jean Wendt, Elizabeth Moore, Cliff Smith, Billy Weaks and Jack Loughlin. The sound effects man, Victor Mintz, sends a vase, hand painted by Leona Parker, crashing to the floor to signify that the tragedy ends in an earthquake. The heroine dies in the arms of the hero. The curtains are pulled by the stage hands, Avery Low and James Heidt. Wow! What a play.

The next day, having become worried over national affairs, Secretary Bissette turns his television on Congress. In the Senate, Senator Lawrence Andrews, who opposes the Child Suffrage Bill introduced by Senator Eleanor Simpkins, is carrying on a magnificent filibuster. Senator John Cline continues the filibuster, and he stops during one part of his speech to drink three pitchers of ice water containing ice cubes made in the new Beatrice Rogers Polar Frigidaire. Finally the head of the Democratic party, Miriam Blanton, breaks the filibuster by asking the President of the Senate, Nina Garner, to arrange for a vote. The Clerk of the Court, J. L. Casteen, distributes the ballots. Needless to say, the bill is defeated by the Republican party, the leaders being Benjamin Fussell, Rufus Horne, Constance Harrell, and Evelyn Rhodes. In the House the parties are in a clinch over a revenue bill introduced by

Mr. Bissette switches off his television just as a nurse, Ruth Davis, enters to announce several visitors. The Secretary of the Treasury, Tom Sneeden, the Secretary of Agriculture, Herschel Brown, wearing a potted cauliflower from the Mary Catherine Gorman Hot House, Postmaster General Robert Buck, and the Secretary of Interior, Miriam Neal, with six dozen roses from the Rose Collie Florist Shoppe, walk in gaily to cheer the patient.

Soon after the friends leave, who should drop in for a spicy, newsy chat but George Chadwick The Secretary asks George what he's doing these days. "Well, Sam," begins George, "I've just been promoted to manager of the Toy Department at the Billy King Department Store. You know that's just this side of Julian MacKeithan's Drug Store, and incidentally Marsden Ward is still the soda jerker there. Do you remember May Anne Shepard, the cute blond number who graduated with us in '38? Well, she's head of the ready-to-wear department in Billy's store. Shelton Moore is chief in the hardware division, and Doris Bell is handling the gift section."

"Well, George, I don't remember any of these business establishments in town. Have they sprung up since my illness?" asks Mr. Bissette.

"Oh, no," answered George, "They aren't here. They're in Wilmington; I'm just here on my vacation. Do you know that we've adopted the city manager plan of government in old Wilmington? Emily Seitter is our chief executive and Eleanor Westbrook, Douglas Gower, and Mary Van Nes are on the council. By the by, Julian Grissom has a prosperous auto repair company. I forgot to tell you the grandest news ever; last week I sold $25.00 worth of toys to Mary Robertson's Kindergarten. Inez Fulbright, Nancy Lynch, Doris Andrews, and Shirley Jones are teachers at N. H. H. S. The principal, Leon Andrews, who was recently married to Elizabeth Bowden by our Justice of the Peace, James Vereen, adopted the simplified edition of "The English Language, Its Usage, and Its Literature," written by Jean Bertram. It's getting late old boy, I'd better be running along. Good bye, and good health." After George leaves, Secretary Bissette happens to glance over a list of book reviews written by Annie Fountain, printed by Sanford Rackley; and the paper, he discovers as he reads, has been produced by the Tom Gause Paper Company. As he scans the list, he sees: "You Can Be Beautiful Too" by Frances Taylor; "How to Develop Your Personality" by Pete Page; "The Art of Flirtation" by Clyde Lassiter and Elizabeth Hardwicke; "How to Be Patriotic" by Catherine Eagle.

In ten days Mr. Bissette has at last recovered; but still not being well enough to resume his regular routine, he goes to a beach where he takes a room at a hotel owned by June Buck. There on the beach he finds Dan Cameron running a hot dog stand; Ned Frownfelter as a tawny lifeguard; Katherine Hanson as a swimming instructor, and Hargrove Davis owner of a bingo stand. Next to the hotel is a dance hall run by Jimmie Williamson. On the corner is a swanky merry-go-round operated by

Strolling along, he finds Nelson Calhoun taking pictures of Frank Shepard and Leon Wells who are standing beside a six hundred pound shark. They are so proud of their catch, that they nearly burst all the buttons off their coats bought from the Charles Harper Clothing Store. Farther down the beach he sees a boat race in progress, and the winner is none other than Ransey Weathersbee. For this great achievement the mayor of the thriving beach, Harry Bowden, presents Mr. Weathersbee with a silver loving cup from the Mary Emma Smith Non-Tarnish Silver Store.

Mr. Bissette stops to buy some salt-water taffy at the Mary Elizabeth Jones-Frances Jewell Candy Shoppe. Lily May Branch takes his order while Etta Mae Hansley wraps it and places it in a box. Elizabeth Sherman enters bringing ten boxes of candy, for this shop is so busy it must fill mail orders.

As he walks along the boardwalk, the materials of which were supplied by the Julian Godwin Lumber Co., he happens in front of the Flying Fish Theatre owned by Clarice Rosenman. The Secretary of State buys a ticket from Edna Lee Bell, the ticket seller; and as he enters the lobby the ushers, Betsy Roper, Dot Futrelle, and Lavese Miller, stand ready to lead him to his seat. News of the hour with Floyd Bailey as commentator flashes across the screen featuring Morris Merrit and Delmas Williamson in the greatest boxing match of the year. Then a cartoon, "Tom, Tom the Piper's Son," drawn by Gene Fonvielle slides into view. Later in the main feature he sees Jeanette Bush, Marion Page, Wessell Spooner, and Horace Tyler.

After the show Secretary Bissette returning to his hotel, checks his steps as he hears an incessant drone overhead. Looking up, he sees a gigantic passenger plane over the Josephine Corbett Landing Field. In a few minutes the plane has landed and the welcoming committee composed of Elnita Sellars, Ruby Rogers, and Laurah Raynor go to greet the occupants of the plane. As the door swings back Bernice Levine, an air hostess, steps out. Mr. Bissette immediately walks toward the plane and whom should he see alighting but Alice Parker, world's champion typist; James Sistrunk, a designer for the cover of Eloise Blackwood's Magazine entitled "The Duck's Quack"; then following comes his secretary, Bess Orrell; Frances Coughenour, a technician; Norma Croom, a world famous sculptress; Pearl Horne, advertising agent for the Mary Belle Mahn Streamlined Baby Buggy Company; last but not least, aviator Tom Briggs and his co-pilot, Fred O'Keef, alight and remove their goggles made by the Edna Burriss Eye Protector Corporation. They explain that the plane needs fuel. In twenty minutes Dwight Scoggins arrives driving a Merle Ward Metal Truck containing 2,493 gallons of oil from the Thomas Pickett Lubricating Company. The beach air makes the passengers quite hungry, so Secretary Bissette escorts them to the Ina Lee Sherman Restaurant. Inside, Addie Butler, head of the waitresses, takes their order. Soon Geneva Bowles enters and serves them mushroom soup. Much cheerful conversation adds to the enjoyment of the food and then Christine Coley brings in a mincemeat pie, the contents of which were canned by the Mary Lou Mintz Canning Company. Coffee is also served with the pie, and each person adds to this coffee, sugar from the Vernel Cain Sugar Factory.

In a few hours the plane prepares to take off; Secretary Bissette decides to join the passengers and stop at Saratoga for the races. The huge plane swoops through the air as an eagle after his prey. Time swiftly brings them to Saratoga, where the plane stops long enough to let the secretary out. Edward Ivey offers a cab to Mr. Bissette and carries him to the Harriet Clark Hotel in a whirlwind. After freshening up a bit, the Secretary immediately makes for the races. Upon arriving, he goes to the betting booth where Elizabeth Burton tabulates his bet. Turning from the booth Mr. Bissette sees a policeman who is none other than Walter James, informing Inez Borneman that she must move along. Inez walks away in a huff as she calls out, "Step this way folks for the hottest tip on a race that ever burned your ears. Here contained in this book is the winner of today's race. A small sum of one dollar will win you a million on the winning horse." As Mr. Bissette heads for the race track he sees a souvenir stand where Isabelle Lorek and Dora Swain are selling yellow and green balloons from the Catherine Costello Stretcho Company. In two minutes Gus Leloudis fires a 38 caliber pistol and—they're off! A girls band composed of a saxophone player, Evelyn Rackley; a trombone player, Laura Register; drum major, Edith Smith; and a harmonica artist, Montre Rich—play "Who'd Thought It." Jockey Carlyle Smith urges his horse Mercury on, and David Sidbury on Jack-in-the-Box is close behind. However, Louise Robeson and Dorothy Tompkins are making a good showing. $25,000 goes to Hortense Finklestein and Edith Williams, owners of the winning horses, for Jockeys Smith and Robeson have tied for first place. As Mr. Bissette turns from the race track, his eye takes in a sight which convinces him that horse races always turn into a fashion parade. Annette Abelovitz walks by wearing a pale green chiffon ankle length dress made by her two special seamstresses, Marie Rouse and Thelma Barnhill. Mattie Duke, Lily Belle Wilkins, and Edna Stanland pass by looking very beautiful. Maria Davis, the charming dress designer, who looks quite smart in her rust-brown tweed suit, is seen congratulating the winners.

That evening the Secretary decides out of curiosity to look around town. Two doors from his hotel he finds Kathleen Frazier the manager of a magazine and fruit stand. Desiring to patronize one of the class of '38 he buys a magazine and also some fine oranges grown on the Anna Harrison fruit farm. As he walks along, he sees an antique shop; and who should be locking up for the night, but Betty Leiner. After an enlightening chat with Betty on the wonders of antiques, Mr. Bissette strolls on his way. Soon he comes upon the Russell Green Pawnshop; over the door is written "See me at your earliest inconvenience." He also finds the Louise Harper Barber Shop, which reads "If your hair isn't becoming to you, you should be coming to us." A big electric sign flashes overhead as he approaches the business section. In bright lights the sign glares: "For that bald head use the new Florence Meadows' Hair Raising Tonic." Further on Mr. Bissette sees a dazzling Nite Club. As he enters, the proprietor, Tommy Skipper, greets him cordially. Elizabeth Miller checks his top coat, and then Mr. Skipper leads him to a single table. The lights dim and Katherine Morse, Catherine Flowers, Dorothy Shivar, Lillie May Blake, and Azalie Hyatt all of whose costumes were designed by Elsie Canady, do a snappy tap number to the tune of William Harrison's Swing Orchestra. When the tappers leave, Betty Lytton, most popular blues singer this side of the Mississippi comes out and sings the latest song rage written by Margaret Clemmons. Since his tonsils feel a little dusty, Mr. Bissette strides into the bar where he finds Ben Daniels mixing drinks. Mr. Bissette asks for a drink and a bit of conversation ensues. He discovers that the drinks are supplied by the Jack Chinnis Beverage Company, and that all the glassware is bought from the Louise Melton Wholesale Glass Dealers. Mr. Bissette admires the chandeliers from the Mary Guyton Electric Supply Store. The clock strikes twelve; and Mr. Bissette bids good-bye to Mr. Daniels, gets his hat and coat and ambles across to his hotel.

The next morning he glances over the paper as he drinks his coffee. Turning the pages, he sees in big print "The Allan Huband Laundry takes pleasure in announcing that the winner of their motto contest is Miss Ethel Boteskv. Miss Botesky's winning motto reads, "We Soak the Clothes, Not the Customer." Honorable mention goes to Miss Betty Miller, head of the knitting department at Mary Nash Sellars Art Shop, and to Miss Mary Elizabeth Nurnberger, clerk at the city post office. Later when Mr. Bissette asks the day clerk at the hotel desk, Carolina Johnston, for his mail, she hands him a telegram; he rips it open and reads, "You've had enough vacation stop Go immediately to Colorado stop The Secretary of Forestry will meet you there stop" (signed by the president). The Secretary of State is off again. He instructs the cab driver, Clayton Moore, to hurry to the Jessie Mallard Railway Station; as he has only five minutes in which to catch the train for Colorado. He dashes into the station and purchases a ticket from Adell Edwards, just as Conductor Glenwood Sellars calls out "All aboard." In the train the stewardess, Louise Bennett, comes up to see if he is quite comfortable; he replies affirmatively, but says he would like to have a secretary take a letter for him. The official secretary on the train, Catharine Bradshaw, enters his compartment and takes down the letter with a pencil from the Irene Henry Pencil and Pen Corporation and addresses it to Assistant Secretary of State, Billy Brown. She dashes off the letter on the Dorothy Mallison typewriter. Later Mr. Bissette wanders through the cars where he finds John Covil, and Lacy Sidbury and Robert King, the chief mail clerks. In the engineer's cab he finds Ertle Hewett at the throttle.

At the station Secretary Bissette is met by Secretary of Forestry, Alex McIntire. He places his bags, made by the Myrtle Elkes Leather Company in Mr. McIntire's sixteen cylinder car bought at the Mary Justice Motor Corporation. As they stop before Mr. McIntire's house, Mr. Bissette admires two linden trees perfected by Rosalyn Murray and Margaret Brown, horticulturists. Mr. Bisette finds that he was sent to help Mr. McIntire and his private secretary, Gloria Mitchell, inspect the various forestry offices in that locality.

Later the three go to the main forestry office; while there Mr. Bissette notices Evelyn Kelly, Elizabeth Holt, Aline Carroll, Norma Hall, and Margaret King busily pounding at their respective typewriters. In looking over the files, Mr. Bissette finds that they are kept in exact order by Myrtle Rivenbark, Myrtle Benton, and Estelle Lee. In the next office they find Henry Harrell making a study of the species of the spruce and cypress trees. He explains to them that these trees contain a certain mineral he had discovered, which will be very valuable to mankind. Immediately, these specimens are sent to the Thomas Salmon Laboratory, where Ruth Thomas and Margaret Saleem assist in the experiment.

When the inspection is completed, Mr. McIntire escorts Secretary Bissette to the city library to show him a set of books concerning forestry, which were donated by Elizabeth Fryer, a noted philanthropist. Here they find Elsie Creech and Lucy Cochran, obliging librarians. While there he observes Marian Miller, who is trying to convince the librarians that the carpet from the Madeline Gore Household Furnishings would add greatly to the attractiveness of the library. The secretaries find a lengthy forestry report made out by Malon Smith; this proves a great help to their forestry project. As they come down from the library, they see the Robert Justice Plumbing Works next door to Nettie Baker's Goody Shop. They stop to buy a snack and find Lila Mae Fisher, Mabel Dempsey, Lena Melton assisting their employer, Nettie, in her thriving business. Farther up the street he spies the Tom Smith Cigar Store opposite Doris Ross' Tea Room. Finally, national affairs command Mr. Bissette's attention, and he must leave for Washington. Having traveled during the past summer by train and airplane and desiring something different, Secretary Bissette decides to return to Washington on a bus owned by the Ernest Starnes Transportation Company.

On the bus he finds maker of French dolls, Lillian Fowler; Mary B. Sell, artist; Jean Smith, Olympic swimming champion; May Price, winner of the United States Archery Contest; Clara McLean and Mildred Land, renowned cosmeticians; Mildred Raynor, inventor of a solution to prevent runs in silk stockings. Having to wait a few hours at St. Louis for a transfer, he goes to the William Thornton Haberdashery to buy a new hat. On his way he notices Mary Thompson's Millinery Shoppe. At the bus station Mary Carr Sutherland and Inez Baggette, agents of the Travelers' Aid, make arrangements for his trip to Washington.

Soon Mr. Bissette is on his way home . . . "It's a small world after all," he sighed. "I met everybody who was in my graduating class at N. H. H. S. We are all cast on a mighty stage—some in the leading roles, others in the supporting roles; but each is building and molding his part, however insignificant; each is constantly holding his thought above the petty things and gazing toward the heights beyond.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the graduating Seniors of New Hanover High School, of Wilmington, North Carolina, do hereby, on this Fourth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Thirty-eight, proclaim to all concerned our Last Will and Testament.

To our heirs, the rising Seniors, we do bequeath, First and foremost, our untiring ability to study and digest our studies, an achievement which we trust will not be surpassed by any future generation of Seniors; Second, our undying love and never-ending respect for the faculty, which we trust will not be abused; Third, our respect for all underclassmen, particularly the poor, defenseless freshmen; and Last, but not least, that mighty symbol of Senior power, the Senior steps, which we trust will be kept traditionally clean of all underclassmen.

Individual members have offered wills as follows:

I, CYRUS HOGUE, bequeath my political ability to DAN THOMASON.

I, TOM UNDERWOOD, will my slim and graceful figure to BILLY McCLAMMY-feeling confident that he will keep it as streamlined as mine.

I, WILBUR BRYANT, leave my executive ability to BUREN SIDBURY.

I, MARY B. SELL, do bequeath my artistic ability to ELIZABETH BLAND.

I, MORRIS MERRITT, will my athletic ability to JOHNNY EDENS, trusting that it will be upheld on the field of battle.

I, BETTY LYTTON, do will to thee, WINIFRED BAGWELL, my charm, personality, and school spirit.

I, WALTER JAMES, leave my most heart-felt sympathies with the teachers who have to endure the talkativeness of LOULIE MURCHISON.

I, INEZ FULBRIGHT, do will my intellectual ability to HARRIET HARRINGTON, who probably won't need it.

I, FLORENCE WOODBURY, will burden SYLVY ANN PRESSON with my dry wit.

I, ELIZABETH HARDWICKE, take my dimples and eyes with me but leave my flirting ability to MARY BETH HIGHSMITH.

I, MARION WESTBROOK, will my quiet and bashful ways to DOUGLAS PREVATT.

I, MARTHA McCAIG, take my geometry grade with me, out of pity for others.

In witness whereof, I, the President of the Senior Class, do approve of this Last Will and Testament.
